Question 1

What impact would a possible re election of Donald Trump have on US or global markets?

Michael Heine: .I think we'd be in for a very much more exciting period and uncertainty for sure. The world is in a pretty challenged situation at the moment, it's very uncertain what is happening globally, geopolitically, et cetera and it's hard to know what impact the election outcome might have on the world. I think one observation I would make about Trump is that he is very much about America first, so that could impact international markets and trades. But to forecast where stock markets might go, equity markets might go, interest rates, et cetera, it's too hard really to forecast that at the moment. But it's certainly a very interesting question and thank you for that.
